FULL PROJECT MANAGEMENT

Stage records and handover

The paperwork that moves a managed build from one stage to the next and then hands it to you: a record for each stage, the handover record, what you are given at handover, and the defects list that stays open until every item is put right.

☐ STAGE RECORD ☐ HANDOVER ☐ DEFECTS CLOSED

Issued by Yaadly Ltd, England and Wales no. 17358077. You buy the job from Yaadly at one agreed price, and Yaadly engages and pays the trades. A named person at Yaadly signs every record and approves every payment to a trade. No record is signed by a system or a model. These are project records between Yaadly and you. They are not certificates issued under any law, building code or professional scheme, and they do not replace an approval from the municipal corporation or any regulator.

A. How this document works

Each stage of the work is checked against the agreed scope before the trade is paid for it. At the end, the work is handed over with a list of anything still to finish, and a defects period starts. When every defect is put right, the defects closed record ends the job.

> What these records are. A record of what was checked, what was agreed and who signed, kept between Yaadly and you. None of them is a certificate issued under any law, building code or professional scheme. Inspections and approvals by the municipal corporation, and any certificate a regulator issues (for example on electrical work), are separate and are listed in the handover pack when they exist.

STEP	WHAT HAPPENS	SIGNED BY
1	The stage is inspected against the scope. The inspector is never the trade who did it.	Inspector
2	The stage completion record sets down what was seen, what is still open, and the value of the stage.	Yaadly
3	You confirm you have seen the record and the evidence.	You
4	Yaadly invoices you for the stage and pays the trade for it.	A named person at Yaadly
5	At the end, the handover record lists anything still to finish, and the defects period starts.	Yaadly, the trade, you
6	When every defect is put right, the defects closed record ends the job.	Yaadly, you

B. Stage plan
